From Screen Addiction to Self-Development: A Student's Journey

Like most students of my age, my day once began and ended with a screen. The alarm on my phone woke me up, and the same phone kept me busy till I fell asleep again. Notifications, reels, games, and messages silently stole my time, my focus, and—without me noticing—my ambition.

At first, it felt harmless. “Just five more minutes,” I would say. But those five minutes often became one hour. Slowly, my books gathered dust, my concentration weakened, and my goals started looking distant. I was connected to the world, yet disconnected from myself. It was truly felt that “Time and tide wait for none,” yet precious hours were being thrown away without thought.

The turning point came when I realized a simple truth: screens were using me more than I was using them.

A firm decision was made to change. It became clear that “Where there is a will, there is a way.” I fixed time limits, kept my phone away while studying, and replaced scrolling with reading, writing, and thinking. The first few days were difficult, but soon I felt something wonderful—clarity. My mind became calmer, my studies improved, and I discovered time I never knew I had.

The change did not come overnight, but it was steady and meaningful. The mind became calmer and more focused, like muddy water slowly becoming clear. Work began to be completed on time, and confidence returned. Along with improvement in studies, qualities like self-control, discipline, and responsibility also started growing.

Gradually, a new kind of happiness was felt—the happiness of achievement, not of escape. I learnt that true freedom does not lie in doing whatever one likes, but in having control over one's own desires.

Today, I still use technology—but as a tool, not a trap. This journey taught me that self-development begins the moment when we choose discipline over distraction. When we control our screen, we will finally begin to control our life.

This is not the story of just one student. There are many students like this, silently wasting their valuable years without realizing their true worth. It is time for such students to wake up and understand that their life is more precious than a small screen. Each one of us has great potential hidden inside. If we learn to control our habits and use our time wisely, we can rise higher, achieve more, and become the best version of ourselves.

The future is waiting for us—we only need to take the first step. “Your future is created by what you do today, not tomorrow.”

Failure: The Best Teacher in Disguise – “Failure Is the Pillar of Success”

Everyone desires success, but failure is something most people fear. However, failure plays a very important role in shaping a person’s life. It may look painful and disappointing at first, but it teaches lessons that no book can ever teach.

In the life of a student, failure often comes in the form of poor marks, unfinished goals, or unfulfilled expectations. When a student works hard and still does not get the desired result, the heart feels heavy and the mind becomes disturbed. At such times, many lose confidence and begin to doubt their own abilities. But as the saying goes, “A smooth sea never makes a skilled sailor.” Difficulties and failures are what truly prepare a person for life.

Failure forces a person to stop and think. It makes one realize mistakes and weaknesses that were earlier ignored. It teaches the value of time, discipline, and sincere effort. It is truly said, “Experience is the best teacher.” A student who never fails may never understand the importance of hard work, but one who fails once learns to become more careful and more determined.

Sometimes failure acts like a mirror. It shows not what a person wants to see, but what a person needs to see. It reminds us of the saying, “Fall seven times, stand up eight.” Every fall makes the mind stronger and the will firmer. A person who learns to rise after falling learns the most important lesson of life—never to give up, no matter how dark the situation may seem.

It is also said, “Success is not final, failure is not fatal; it is the courage to continue that counts.” Courage is born from failure, not from comfort. When a person walks only on the path of ease, strength is never tested. But when failure blocks the way, it teaches how to fight, how to wait, and how to move forward with hope and patience.

Many people think that failure means the end, but in truth it is only a new beginning. As the saying goes, “Every failure is a stepping stone to success.” Each mistake becomes a lesson, and each lesson becomes a guide. Slowly, confidence returns—not in pride, but in quiet determination and stronger self-belief.

It is rightly said, “The gem cannot be polished without friction, nor man perfected without trials.” Just as fire tests gold, failure tests character. It removes weakness, builds patience, and teaches endurance. The person who passes through failure comes out not broken, but refined and stronger.

History is full of examples of great people who failed many times before achieving success. They did not allow failure to defeat them. Instead, they remembered that “If at first you do not succeed, try, try again.” Each failure made them stronger, wiser, and more patient.

Thus, failure is not an enemy but a friend in disguise. It may hurt, but it also heals. It may break confidence for a moment, but it builds a stronger one for life. If accepted with the right attitude, failure becomes the best teacher and the surest guide on the path to true success.

“Waves are inspiring, not because they rise and fall, but because they never fail to rise again.”
